Detailed Transcript

Q1: Describe a project where you had to meet a tight deadline.

(InterviewRound.BEHAVIOURAL)

A: One project where I had to meet a tight deadline was during a hackathon where our team had 36 hours to design, build, and demo a working product. Midway through the event, we realized our initial scope was too broad for the time available. As the team lead, I quickly reassessed priorities and broke the project into must-have and nice-to-have features. I assigned clear responsibilities, set short internal checkpoints, and focused the team on delivering a stable core solution instead of extra features. I also handled integration while others focused on development and testing.

Score: 3.8/5 - Solid answer, good communication skills.

Q2: Give me an example of a time you failed and what you learned from it.

(InterviewRound.BEHAVIOURAL)

A: I once underestimated the time required for a project and missed an internal milestone, which taught me to plan with realistic buffers and communicate risks early rather than rushing at the end.

Score: 3.2/5 - Excellent use of STAR method.

Q3: Tell me about a time you handled a difficult situation with a coworker.

(InterviewRound.BEHAVIOURAL)

A: I once worked with a teammate who had a very different communication style and often pushed back on ideas, which created tension in the team. Instead of escalating it, I spoke with them privately to understand their perspective and clarify expectations. We agreed on clearer roles and a more structured way to share feedback, which improved collaboration and helped us deliver the project smoothly. The experience taught me that addressing issues early and respectfully prevents small conflicts from becoming bigger problems
